dive into water >to set sail> to enter, go in (> to begin (a month))

Because pearl diving that was the mainstay of the economy of Kuwait and eastern Arabia, he proposes the following scenario for the synchronic process of this meaning extension:

- 1) dašš ‘set sail, dive into water’ (in literal meaning)
- 2) dašš ‘to set sail’ (literal) and ‘enter’ (figurative)
- 3) dašš the meaning ‘to set sail’ become obsolete
- 4) dašš ‘to enter’ (literal) and ‘to set sail’ (figurative)
- 5) dašš ‘to enter’

- 1 meaning (for sail)

dašš/daššēna l-ǵōṣ
'He/we went pearl-diving.'
(and al-Ayyoub (1982: 53, 1997: 222))

daššēt/daššēna l-baḥar
'I/we put to sea.'"
(al-S‘aydān (1971: 578))

Also, in Kuwaiti, Bahraini and Emirati dialects the next sense:

dašša lit. ‘the entering, going in’ - ‘the beginning of the pearl diving season proper’ dašša – (preceded by yoom الدشة (يوم the first day of pearl diving (Gulf Arabic Dictionary, Hamdi Qafisheh, p. 220))

- 2 meaning (enter)

dašš – to enter, to go in dišš! l-baab mafkuuk – Enter! The door is unclosed

- “Khalaf (1988: 170), however, states that dašš is nowadays used to talk about the landing of an aeroplane, e.g.:

daššat t-ṭayyāra
'The plane is approaching (the airport)' (i.e. 'Aero-motion Verb').

- 3 meaning (temporal events)

dašš l-išta
'The winter has begun.'
(Khalaf (1988: 169-170))

ba‘ad ayyām yidišš š-šaha t-tāni
'The next month will begin in few days.'"
(al-S‘aydān (1971: 577))
